Redstone Presbyterian
SeniorCare

In our mission and core values, Redstone upholds honesty and transparency with our constituents and the general public. We have not wavered from our commitment to these values during the COVID-19 pandemic. We consider it a privilege to care for the residents within our Redstone family.

This update is to alert you that on May 27, 2020, we learned that one of our Independent Living residents on our North Huntingdon campus has tested positive for COVID-19.   Throughout this pandemic, we have been actively monitoring our residents and employees for signs and symptoms of the virus. We continue to do so and are following all of the instructions of the Department of Health.

We have strong infection control methods in place. All of our staff members are following public health recommendations to reduce the risk of spreading COVID-19. These include strict handwashing procedures, wearing facemasks, and gowns and gloves when interacting with residents who are at risk or may be sick. From the beginning of this pandemic, our cleaning procedures have been rigorous. We have enforced a no visitor policy across our campuses for the greatest level of protection.   We are prepared to care for residents in isolation, with best practices in place.

Our residents, families, and employees have faced many hardships over the past months as we sought to keep the COVID virus out of our Redstone communities.   We are grateful for these efforts, and we believe that these efforts have put us in a stronger position to deal with the case that has been confirmed here. Our prayers are with those who are directly impacted by the virus, and for each and every one of us during this difficult time.
